A Ferry Story
Outside of the Gallery of Modern Art, there is the Duke of Wellington statue - which usually has a cone on its head. The cone is not supposed to be there but the public and the Council have battled for years over its placement. Whenever the cone gets removed, within a few hours there will be a new one on top. The cone first appeared in the early 1980s, where it is believed that a horse dealer student sealed the statue after a night out to place a new one on the Duke's head.
