

Background Information – Denton Community College

Denton Community College is an 11 – 16, 1350 place mixed community high school. We opened in September 2010 and in January 2012 moved into our new state of the art building which has the latest up-to-date technology and resources.

In 2024, working in collaboration with Northern Education Trust, Denton Community College has celebrated a significant leap in GCSE performance, marking a proud moment for students, staff, and the wider community. A notable 61% of students achieved a pass in both English and Maths, with 44% securing a strong pass in these core subjects. This achievement is projected to surpass the national average for the first time, reflecting an impressive 18% improvement in a single year. It is likely that Denton Community College will stand out as one of the most improved schools in the region. We are looking for dedicated teaching staff to join our continuing journey.

Denton Community College Organisation and Standards

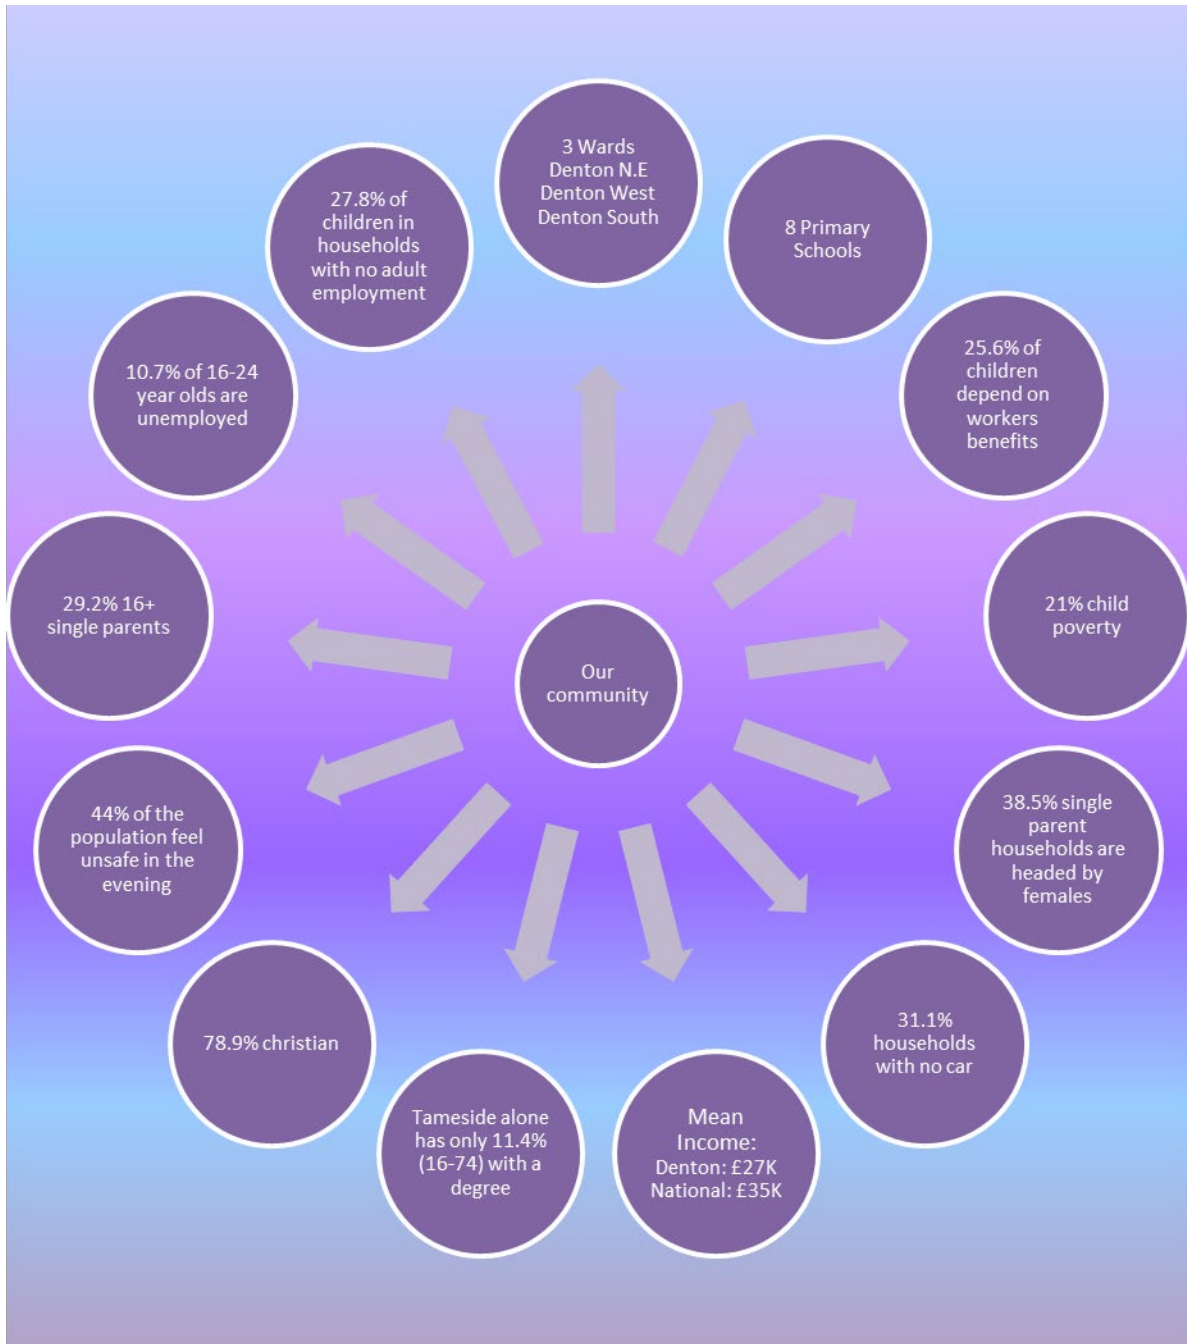

The college is organised around three distinct learning communities within the larger College. In each, learners feel a sense of belonging and purpose. Teams of staff spend dedicated time with students in each learning community to facilitate individualised learning programmes driven by agreed targets. Mentoring and coaching ensure appropriate challenge and progress. High standards are expected and high aspirations are nurtured for all, learners and staff.

Denton

Denton is a town within the Metropolitan Borough of Tameside, in Greater Manchester. It is five miles (eight km) to the east of Manchester city centre, and has a population of around 27000. Historically part of Lancashire, Denton grew as a significant centre of hat manufacture, though today it is a predominantly residential town. Tameside does not have school catchment areas; parents can choose any of the High schools within the Borough. The two predecessor schools (Two Trees Sports College and Egerton Park Arts College) have traditionally recruited students from their local geographical areas within the Town. Although the College does have an urban context it does not have challenges that some inner-city areas present. The vast majority of our students are delightful who respond positively to firm boundaries and clear expectations.
