

People who help us

We really enjoyed looking at your family photos last week. If you've not sent one in yet, there's still time. They are great talking points for the children, to help them build confidence.

As you know this week we will be starting to talk about 'people who help us'.

THURSDAY 24th will be our DRESS UP DAY when the children are welcome to dress in costumes of people who help us. This could be a doctor, nurse, police officer, delivery driver or construction worker. Or even a teacher.

During the week we would like you to talk about people who help you and your child specifically. This might be as close to home as Nanna and Grandad picking up your child if you're at work. Or even your child helping you by doing jobs in the house. If you see any emergency workers whilst out and about, you could talk about how they are helping people.

Remember to write about any chats you have with your child on their tapestry account.

We look forward to seeing them dressed up on Thursday.
