

F2 paint self portraits

The first job for each child was to paint their 'skin', choosing from a selection of pre-mixed tones.

Once the first layer was dry they then added their features, looking carefully at themselves in the mirror to choose the colours they needed.

The children all worked hard to hold their paintbrushes in exactly the same way that they have practiced with their pencils. They also used their spare hand to hold their paper still, just like they should when they write.
