

We looked for clues to see what we were going to do today. There were lots of things in the bag!

Harriett spotted a wooden spoon. "Mixing!" she shouted, moving her hand around in a circle.

"Cooking!" said Charlotte when she saw Mrs Silverwood's apron.

We looked at all the different objects. There were eggs, flour, sugar butter and syrup.

"Make a cake," said Woody. That was a good idea as we would need most of these ingredients for a cake. Pixie asked, "Are we making cake?". It was a good question.

Ethan didn't think so. "I think pancakes."

Then we spotted a special book. Pixie thought it was a 'menu' book. Trixie called it a 'see-what-you-need-in-a-bowl' book. What a fantastic idea! It was our recipe book and it was open on...

...ginger biscuits!

flour

ground ginger

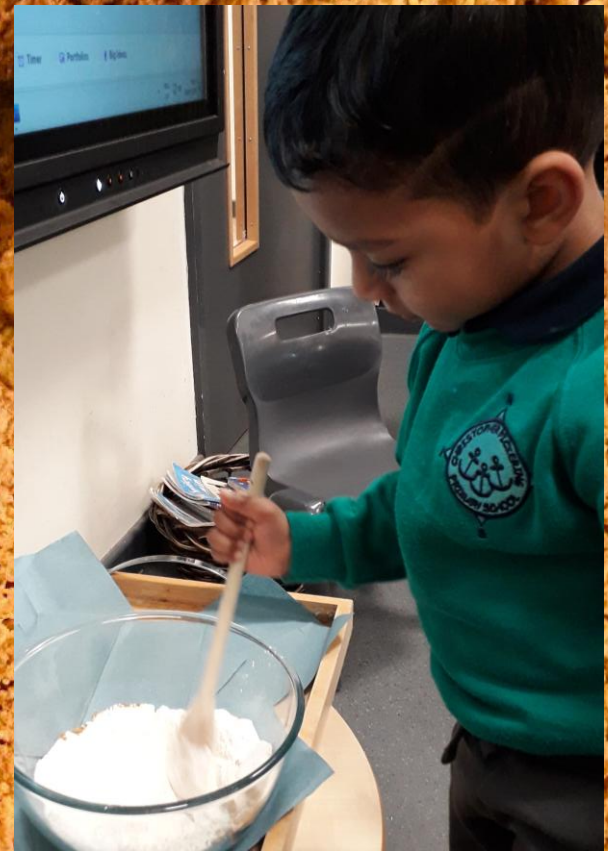

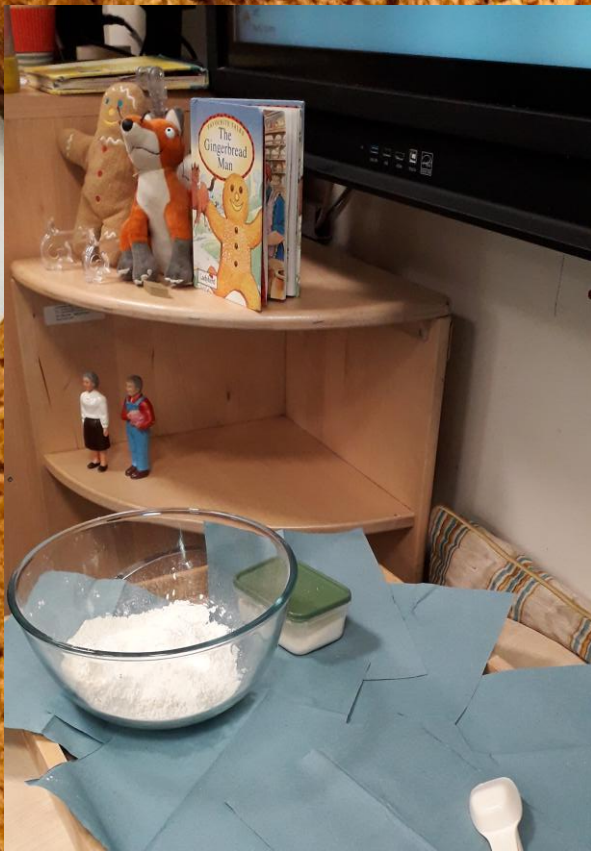

butter

syrup

egg

We put the flour into the bowl, then Charlotte carefully poured in the sugar. It was then time to mix them together, which was Sam's job.

Then we found a jar of ground ginger. Rahela liked the smell. Charlotte said, "it smells like gingerbread men." She was right. Rory measured out a spoonful and Phoebe stirred it in.

Next we melted the butter and syrup in a pan. When it had cooled down a bit, Mrs Silverwood poured it into the powdery mixture. Charlotte exclaimed, "it's making dough!" Well done Charlotte!

Max was in charge of mixing in the egg. He enjoyed trying to burst the yolk with the wooden spoon. It took a few attempts though! Good mixing from Jacob too.

Everyone rolled their dough into a ball then 'gently' pressed it down. Max got a bit sticky though!

Then we put them in the oven to cook. The dough changed from being sticky and softy to crunchy and hard. They tasted delicious!
