

When we looked in our bag today, the first thing we saw was Mrs Silverwood's apron. "It's for cooking," said Blake.

But what were we going to cook?
"I think there might be a burger," said Myla.

Then we found a book.
"Your baking book," said Jacob. He was right, it was a recipe book.

We looked through the pages until we found what we wanted.

"Biscuits," said Musa. "I like ginger biscuits!"

Parker, Blake and Grace helped to measure out the flour and the salt. Then Carson measured out the sugar and Jax added the ginger.

Mrs Silverwood added the butter and syrup to the pan, "because it needs to melt," said Myla.

Once the butter and syrup was melted we added it to the bowl. Had we remembered everything? “We need the egg,” said Ada. Yasmeen told us to, “mix it”. So we did!

“It smells like the play dough,” said Jacob. That’s because our play dough has got ginger in at the moment!

“It smell_ delicious,” said Florence.

We talked about how we needed to cook the sticky dough so that they would turn into biscuits.

“They will go crispy,” said Jacob.

“I think they will be like crunchy,” added Myla.

“I think they will be like cake,” said Arlo B.

When the biscuits came out of the oven we left them to cool, then ate them! They were delicious!
