National Zoo Giant Panda Bo Bo Begins Her New Life In China

On February 21, giant panda Bo Bo started preparing for her one-way journey to China. She was ready to be released back into the wild. The National Zoo panda began the morning with a breakfast of bamboo and biscuits. After, she was put inside a steel travel crate and transported to Washington International Airport.

Bo Bo was with her keeper, Marty and zoo vet Katharine Hope. They boarded a plane that whisked her away to her new life. During the 16-hour flight, the three-year-old giant panda happily munched her way through a selection of treats.
