Dear Parents,

I hope you all had a relatively restful half term without any remote learning to worry about! I know it was a lot calmer in the Conway household without the thought of KS3 Science and GCSE German, whilst at the same time scrambling for IT devices and complaining about wifi drop outs!

You will most likely have heard the Prime Minister's announcement yesterday in which he stated that all primary pupils can return to school on Monday 8 March. We are obviously delighted that all of our pupils are now able to return, but we must also ensure that we update our risk assessments and examine school procedures. Over the next few days we will be reviewing our policies, as well as amongst other things looking at plans for lunches, entrance/exits to school and looking at our curriculum so that it is suited to our children. The organisation for the return of pupils in September seemed to work well. We will build on the successes of what we did at the start of the year and make adaptations based upon what we learned. All information will be shared with you in ample time so that you are aware of when the children start and so on.

In the meantime, we will continue to provide on site education for those pupils who are eligible, as well as remote learning for those working at home. As always, I thank you for your support during this period. As I alluded to at the start of this letter, as a parent, I fully understand the difficulties of homeschooling!

Thanks for all your support over the last few weeks. If we can support in any way please reach out.

Nick Conway
