HATCHING

To use the hatching technique, I use lots of straight lines to build up shading in my sketches. For darker areas I used more lines and used less for the lighter areas.

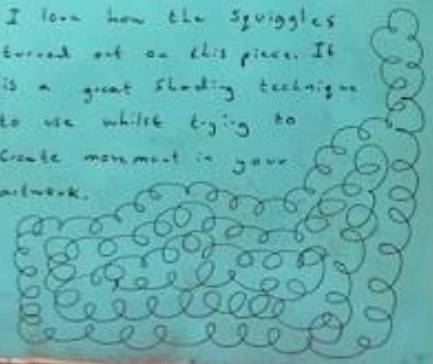

DOTS

The dot technique is quite time consuming but effective when done correctly. I preferred it here using more dots for the darker, sand and using more spread out dots for the light sand.

SQUIGGLE

I love how the squiggles turned out on this piece. It is a great shading technique to use whilst trying to create movement in your artwork.

BASIC LINE

For this sketch of rocks, I just draw the outline of them with a singular line and created texture by using smaller lines inside. This technique of line making is as effective as some of the other ones for creating texture but can be good for abstract art.

CROSS HATCHING

Cross hatching is one of my favorite line making techniques. It creates nice shading and texture. I see how this crab turned out by using this technique.

STRAIGHT

Straight line abstract drawing used the lines to create rocks and using little dots in certain places to create texture.

Student example Drawing using different types of marks in each section

Student used biro pen for each study, but changes the way they use the pen marks. Using different background papers can also change the look of the piece
