Advice for Parents/Carers on Student Suspension/Exclusion from School

No Head of School likes to suspend a student from school, but there may be times when this is considered necessary. If your child has been suspended it means that he or she will not be allowed to attend school because of the difficulties that have arisen concerning a serious breach of conduct. The evidence required to suspend will need to meet the 'civil standard' of proof i.e. on the balance of probability, it is more likely than not that the student was responsible for the breach of school discipline.

The school will follow the local authority guidance on suspensions.

Fixed period suspension

A child who seriously breaches the School's Behaviour Policy can be suspended for a fixed period of time. Schools can suspend a child if:

- they have seriously breached the School's Behaviour Policy
- allowing them to stay in school would seriously harm their education or welfare, or the education or welfare of other students

Your child cannot be given fixed period (non-permanent) suspensions which total more than 45 school days in any one school year.

We will make every effort to contact you on the day a suspension is given and follow up with a letter including information on:

- the period and reason for suspension;
- your duty during the first five days of any suspension to ensure that your child is not present in a public place during normal school hours, whether in the company of a parent/carers or not;
- any arrangements made by us that apply from the sixth day of the suspension.

Permanent exclusions

The Head of School will usually only permanently exclude a student as a last resort, after trying to improve the student's behaviour through other means. However, there are exceptional circumstances in which a Head of School may decide to permanently exclude a student for a 'one-off' offence.

If your child has been permanently excluded, be aware that:

- the school's governing body is required to review the Head of School's decision and you may meet with them to explain your views on the exclusion;
- if the governing body approves the exclusion, you can appeal to an independent appeal panel organised by the local authority;
- we must explain in a letter how to lodge an appeal;
- we will work in partnership with other Stockport schools to provide full time education for any student from the sixth day onwards until the suspension ends;
- the local authority must provide full-time education from the sixth day of a permanent exclusion.

Below is a list of incidents which could lead to suspension from school:
