L.O. To draft a conversation between two characters using accurately punctuated speech

Criteria for accurately punctuated direct speech:

Inverted commas hug the spoken words

"I am fine!" laughed Charlie.

You must use capital letters for the starts of sentences and people's names:

"I am fine!" laughed Charlie.

Punctuation must be used before you close your speech:

"I am fine!" laughed Charlie.

Think of interesting verb choices: laughed/chuckled/smiled/joked/replied/answered etc. Do not use SAID!

New speaker, new line.

Willy Wonka asked quickly, "How are you, Charlie?"

"I am fine!" laughed Charlie.

Now, have a go at drafting a short conversation between these two characters. It should be no less than eight lines long. Check your work against the criteria as you go!

"I got a golden ticket!" exclaimed Charlie while waving it above his head.

"Well done Charlie!" Willy Wonka replied.

"Thank you." smiled Charlie. He was very excited about visiting the chocolate factory.

"You can have chocolate and more while you're here." Willy Wonka laughed. Charlie was bouncing on his toes getting ready to enter the factory

"Really." chuckled Charlie who was getting more and more anxious to start the tour and see all the wonderful things he had heard about the factory.

"Yeah!" exclaimed Willy Wonka as he walked towards the doors.

"Let's go Grandpa Joe." answered Charlie as he grabbed his grandfather's hand and dragged him forward.

“Well let the tour begin!” Willy Wonka yelled with a smile as he threw open the doors so his guests could enter to see all that awaited for them inside.
