

Tuesday 2nd February

L.O. To draft my diary entry using key features.

Success Matrix	Family member	Self
10 points for describing the author's thoughts and feelings	10	10
20 points for using clear paragraphs to structure your writing	20	20
10 points for using first person 'I' throughout	10	10
20 points for editing and improving work	20	20
10 points for using informal and chatty language	10	10
10 points for using full stops, commas, question marks and exclamation marks	10	10
20 points for using adverbials of time	20	20

Dear diary, I'm sorry I haven't written to you for ages but there has been so much going on I can hardly begin to let you know everything. It all started when I became locked in a chocolate factory - Can you believe it? EEEEEKKKKK!

On Monday, my family and I visited a chocolate factory and when we arrived we were met by the lovely guide who showed us all the wonderful things they made there. She explained that we could look around certain parts of the factory ourselves, if we wished and so we set off to see as much as we could. However, before we knew it, the factory had closed and nobody had come to find us. Luckily for us though, we came across a security guard who escorted us out of the building quickly and safely.

On Tuesday, because of the excitement on Monday, we visited the library and looked at the books. I found some lovely books on Unicorns, which you know I just absolutely adore!! My mam said that I could get three books and so I chose the ones with lots and lots of beautiful pictures of these magnificent creatures. Thankfully, it was quite a quiet day after all the excitement we had the day before.

On Wednesday, I didn't really do much at all and just had a pyjama day, where I sat in front of the log burner and was lovely and toasty. However, Thursday was quite different as we went bowling and you know how much I enjoy this, don't you? There were only a few people in the bowling alley, which isn't normal as you know it's normally bustling like a beehive in there! Jack, mam and I took the bus as my dad and Kayleigh were busy visiting Grandad, with his shopping. When we got there Dad and Kayleigh had just arrived as well and we had lots of fun and I even beat Jack in a few games.

I think that next week I'd like to go to the pictures as I haven't been there for ages, have I? Hopefully I could meet my best friend Emily there and we could watch the film and eat popcorn together. After all that excitement I'm glad to be at home again, writing to you but I would love to go back to the chocolate factory, but only if we don't get locked in again. Hopefully we will be able to get some chocolate while we are there, maybe just one or two dozen bars!!!!