FREE Year 12 Language Taster Days - Cambridge University - February 2019

Do you have any pupils in Year 12 (or equivalent) who might be interested in learning a non-European language at university, either from scratch or post-GCSE?

The Faculty of Asian and Middle Eastern Studies at Cambridge University is holding free taster days on 14 and 21 February. Please see the attached flyer.

Participants will have the chance to:

- try out new languages (Arabic/Chinese/Hebrew/Japanese/Persian/Hindi)
- find out more about these areas of study: the history, politics and culture of these regions
- have a taste of what it is like to be a student and the opportunity to speak to current students
- gain an insight into the invaluable language and life skills and wide range of career options gained from studying Asian and Middle Eastern Studies
- ask questions about admissions

Attendance is free of charge and there are a limited number of travel bursaries available for state school pupils.

Our application deadline is 6th February. Further information and online registration is on the AMES website (<https://www.ames.cam.ac.uk/whats-on/faculty-taster-days>). Pupils should apply for places via our online form: https://cambridge.eu.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_6hV70i4sSy78U1T
