

EARTH SHATTERING EVENTS

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN DISASTER STRIKES?
A LEARNING EXPEDITION BY THE LKS2 CHILDREN AT PLOVER SCHOOL

In the summer term of 2025, the LKS2 children at Plover School embarked on a Learning Expedition called 'Earth Shattering Events', with the aim of answering the guiding question: 'What happens when disaster strikes?'

Through the Expedition, we shone a light on some of earth's most devastating natural disasters. To help children comprehend the force of the natural world, we sought to use both current and historical events to contextualise their learning: the eruption of Vesuvius in Pompeii, AD79 and as a 'disaster' closer to home: the flooding of Fishlake in Doncaster, 2019.

Both tragic events have inspired different styles of high quality writing including poetry, news paper reports and narrative stories. We also have been fortunate to have had several expert visitors to support the children's learning, including a visit from Kerry Poncia, an XP member of staff who was affected by the events of the Fishlake Floods.

Throughout our learning journey, we have also experimented with different styles of artwork inspired by how the use of colours can capture the chaos of a disaster. We have particularly been driven by the artwork of Katsushika Hokusai, who created the well known Great Wave piece which the children have recreated using watercolour paint.

The Fishlake Floods

Dark, gloomy clouds appeared in the sky,
The people in Fishlake gave heavy sigh.
For three weeks straight, the clouds continued to cry.
Overtime, the river's water levels rose up high.

Flood warnings on the news, it didn't look great.
Residents near the river were told to evacuate.
The river felt full, it couldn't hold more water in,
So it spewed it all out, it was time for the flood to begin.

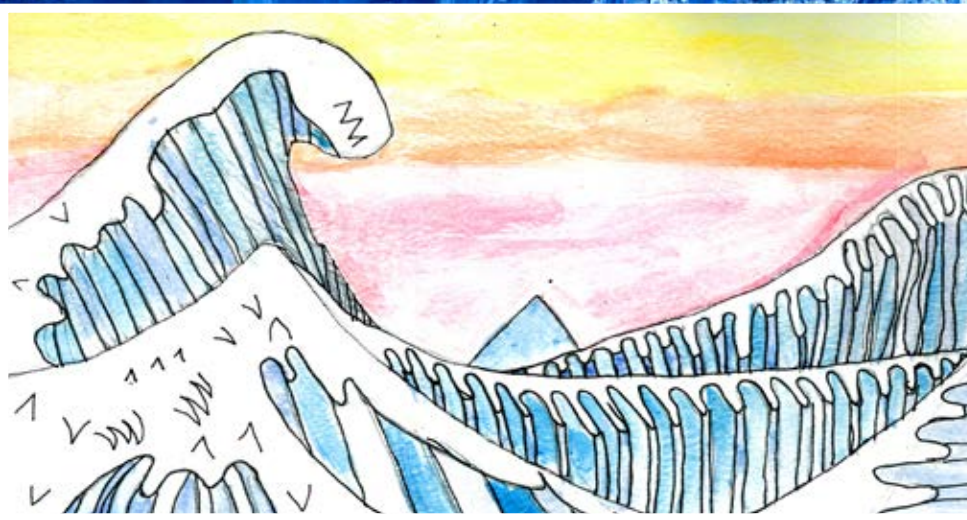

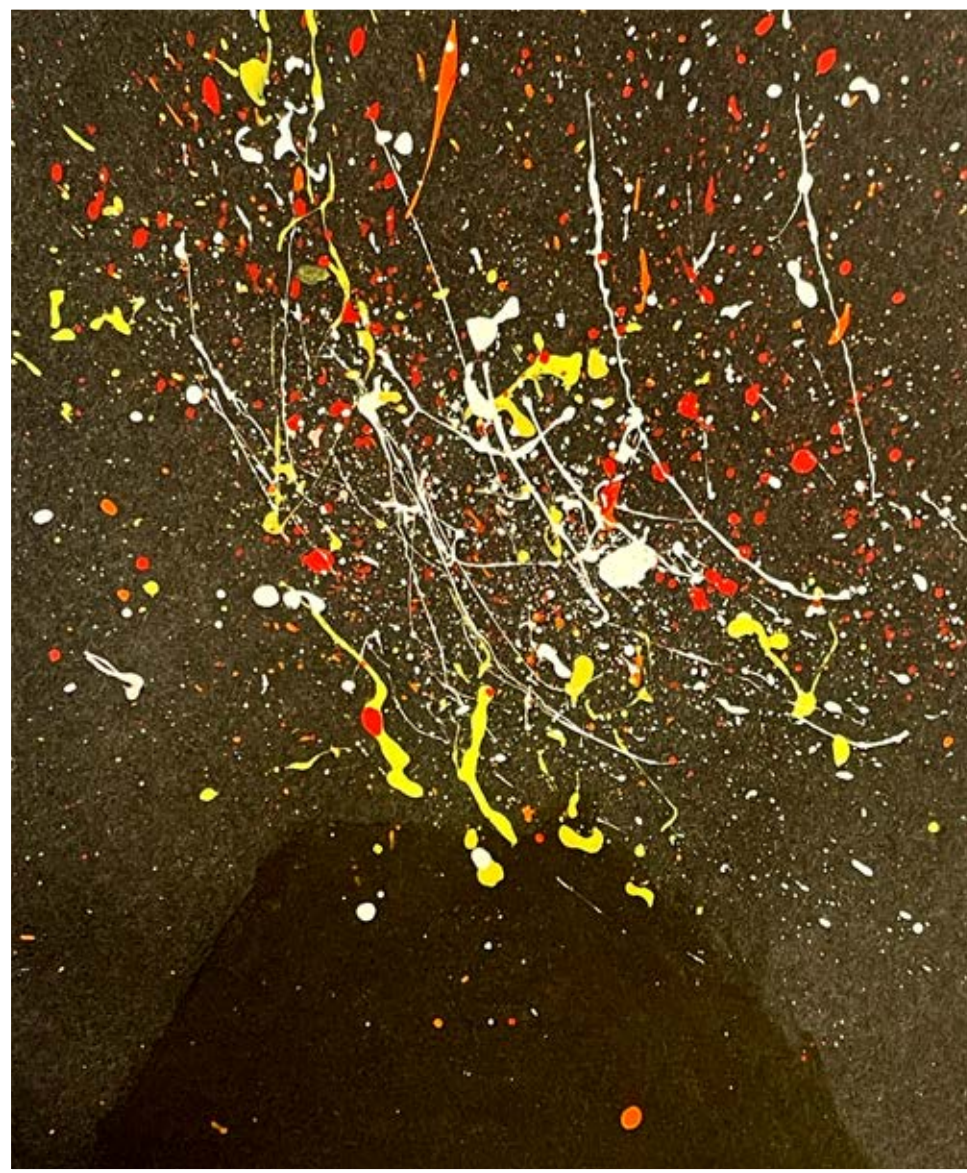

Sandbags were stacked to build a flood defence,
But the water was too strong, its power was intense.
It was on a deadly mission, rushing towards the doors,
Disgusting, mucky water invaded the all the floors.

It happened so quick, families didn't have time to pack,
They had to stay away until it was safe to go back
Who would have thought that persistent, heavy rain,
Could cause so much destruction, devastation and pain.

Weeks later, people returned but, oh gosh, what a mess!
Smelly, soaked furniture, it caused a lot of stress.
They had to start again, to fix their poor, ruined home,
Luckily, people worked together, so no one was alone.

When the flood waters receded, flowers began to grow
Will a flood happen again? Nobody will know.
Although years have passed, Fishlake will never forget,
That living on a floodplain can cause a lot of regret.

High up in the hills is where rivers begin,
To start they flow gently, a small trickle, just thin.

This section is called 'the upper course',
It's gentle, it's peaceful – it's the river's source!

It's narrow and thin and it's not very deep,
It flows gently downhill for it is not yet steep.
But things will soon change for here comes another...
Three little streams to join in with the other.

Tributaries combine – join in with the current,
Deeper and wider and faster – concurrent!
Soon a huge drop will plummet down sharp,
A waterfall – so look out carp!

Steep and rapid the water now flows,
At this point the river's width just grows.
It then continues and heads on its way,
Twisting and turning – meandering they say.

Into the delta water finally flows,
Splashing and crashing as it goes.
The delta expands – becomes a mouth,
Opening up wide as the water flows out.

To join the ocean so vast and wide,
Flowing this way and that as part of the tide.
Rivers are important – they give us life and food,
But in addition provide beautiful views!
