

Acceptable Use Guidelines

Specifically for delivering and assessing online lessons during school closures or isolation periods

All online activity will be conducted to the same safeguarding standards and behaviour expectations as you would see in the classroom at Stobhillgate

Lessons should be hosted by the teacher in a safe, secure and controlled online environment using the video conferencing facility in Google Meet.

If a teacher enables the video function then their head and shoulders are visible, as are the pupil's head and shoulders. This guidance covers what needs to be considered to ensure staff and children are protected during this process.

Guidelines for online learning: Staff

You should conduct yourself online as you would in class.

What does this mean when you are delivering a Google Meet session.

- You should only use your school email to send invites to the lesson.
- You should start and end the session according to your scheduled times.
- You can record each online lesson delivered with the start and end time, all participants invited and all who participated in the lesson.
- You should stop the lesson if there is only one pupil with you on-line and reschedule it.
- If you have a lesson/extended project with one student on your timetable the school must ensure that parents are made aware of this before the lesson and it is recorded. You may ask the student to ensure a parent can hear the lesson.
- You should not have your mobile phone with you whilst delivering your lesson.
- You should deliver the lesson in an appropriate room. A bedroom is not appropriate.
Enable your camera before you go live to check what is visible in your background.
Remove any personal information or inappropriate items that are visible.
- Ensure that there will be no interruptions during your streaming (such as family members in the background). Use the blur function/ or add an appropriate background.
- You should dress according to the school's dress code listed in the school's Code of Conduct.
- Remind all session participants to have their microphones off and only ask questions via the Chat function or when asked to talk. This way you can monitor what is shared with the other pupils.
- If you are using microphones for the question and answer you must mute all microphones as the students enter the lesson and unmute as required.
- Remind your pupils of the expectations (listed in their guidance) at the start of your lesson.
- You should not have drinks or eat any food whilst delivering the lesson.

Guidelines for online learning: Pupils

Remote sessions will be hosted by the teacher in a safe and controlled online environment using the video conferencing facility in Google.

If a teacher enables video then their head and shoulders are visible, as are your head and shoulders.

A lesson will be discontinued if there is only one pupil and one teacher on-line and will be rescheduled. Unless you have 1-2-1 lessons.

You should behave online as you would behave in class.

What does this mean when you are taking part in a live online lesson/session?

- You should not seek to disrupt or distract either your own learning or those of others with inappropriate use of digital tools.
- If you feel uncomfortable or feel that anything inappropriate has happened in the virtual environment you should contact Mr Whitehead at school.
- You should turn up for a live online lesson on time and with the appropriate equipment for that subject.
- You should end the online lesson when the teacher tells you it has finished.
- You should not have a mobile phone with you when the lesson is taking place.
- You should take part in the session in a room other than your bedroom: dining room, kitchen, office, each is more appropriate.
- You must not take photos or screenshots at any point in the lesson.
- All work uploaded should be your own.
- You should stay focused and quiet when involved in a live online lesson/sessions.
- You should dress appropriately
- You should know how to communicate with the teacher, and with other students, during the live online lesson, and you should follow these rules throughout

Stobhillgate First School

- You should ask permission to leave your live online lesson (for example, to go to the toilet); this should be done via the Chat function - You should not have drinks or eat any food during the lesson.

Guidelines for online learning: Parents

The sessions will be hosted by the teacher in a safe and controlled online environment using the video conferencing facility in Google

If a teacher enables video then their head and shoulders are visible, as are the pupil's head and shoulders.

Parents can play a vital role in supporting their children during this period.

Our advice would be:

- Keep in regular contact with your child's school by ensuring you access updates on the website, facebook, twitter or via direct emails or texts
- Get to know your child's timetable, and check which lessons they are going to be having online.
- Be strict about where these lessons are happening: ideally, they should be done in a private place (such as a dining room, or office) where interruption and distraction is kept to a minimum. A bedroom is not appropriate.
- Double-check that nothing personal (such as images, or messages) are visible, either on desktops or in the background.
- Check that work being set by teachers is being submitted and that deadlines are being met.
- Make sure that your child dresses appropriately for any online lessons.
