CONNOR RICHARDSON

Connor has been a fantastic psychology student and an amazing all round student. During the 2 years that I have known Connor I have been immensely impressed by his commitment and genuine interest in all aspects of psychology. He has brought so much to his lessons in terms of discussion and knowledge from his wider reading. While he often had to compete with his others to make his point heard Connor never let a lesson go by without ensuring he voiced his ideas and opinions on whatever topics we were discussing. Connor was always generous with his time, while he was striving to reach his own personal high goals in psychology he was never too busy to help his fellow student who may have struggling with a new concept or piece of research. Connor always approached the lessons with such humour. Perhaps my best memory of Connor is whenever things appeared to be going “Baddeley” in the lesson Connor would strive to make sure things went without a “Hitch.” Connor is probably one of the politest students I have ever met – a true gentleman and a scholar.
